

Montreal, Jan 2012

BY LUIGI DE BERNARDINI | SAT JAN 21 2012

I'm on the plane again. Heading Montreal, for the Invensys "Collaboration Service Delivery" meeting. It's the first trip of 2012, just few months after having been on the road three weeks in Paris, Nashville, Chicago.

As always leaving is tough. A mix of stress, sadness, fear for what you leave and for what you will find when you'll get back. Making several weeks of travel every few months compatible with managing the company and, mostly, managing a family is becoming harder and harder each time.

In any case the expectation is high. I've never been in Montreal, and never been in Canada during winter. I'm really curious to see the "big winter", a winter that I expect so different from the one we are used to in Italy, even in our area which is enough north and close to the mountains. In the meanwhile I really appreciate the inflight Internet connection. Not cheap... but it's really nice to have the possibility to spend some time online.

